Public dissemination event: Understanding how gambling may impact on migrants

Thursday 29 November 2018
Carriageworks Theatre
Leeds
1pm – 3pm

We are holding a public dissemination event to present the findings of our research project which explored the impact of gambling on migrant communities in Leeds.

We would like to invite people with knowledge or experience of migration and gambling-related harm, for example people working with or representing different migrant groups.

During the event we hope to hear your thoughts about our findings and what things you would like to see in the future in order to better support migrants experiencing gambling-related harm. Attendees will be offered a gift voucher for participation.

The event will be led by Dr Stephanie Bramley, Social Care Workforce Research Unit at King's College London.
