Our organisation:

Manuel Bravo Project is a charitable organisation based in Leeds that aims to help asylum seekers who are unable to find adequate legal representation.

The organisation employs OISC level 3 Case Workers and benefits from a large team of volunteers including barristers, solicitors, law students and other individuals giving their time to assist people who would otherwise be unable to find legal support. The organisation is regulated by The Office of the Immigration Services Commissioner (OISC).

We work together with representatives from local and national organisations, the faith sector ex-clients, and volunteers, to create positive change within the communities that need it the most, by investing funding and expertise to build a better future now

What are we looking for?
